THE REASONS BEHIND

i. Psychological

ii. Cultural

iii. Educational and Economical

iv. Exploitation of women in the world of work

v. The Invisible Girl Child Labour

vi. Vulnerable to Abuse

Psychological:

- From childhood, girls are encouraged to play passive role.
- They are subjected to mental conditioning, to do and think only the way the elders of the society deemed right.
- They are given little opportunity or no opportunity to make decisions.
- The denial is all in the name of tradition followed by the society.

Cultural:

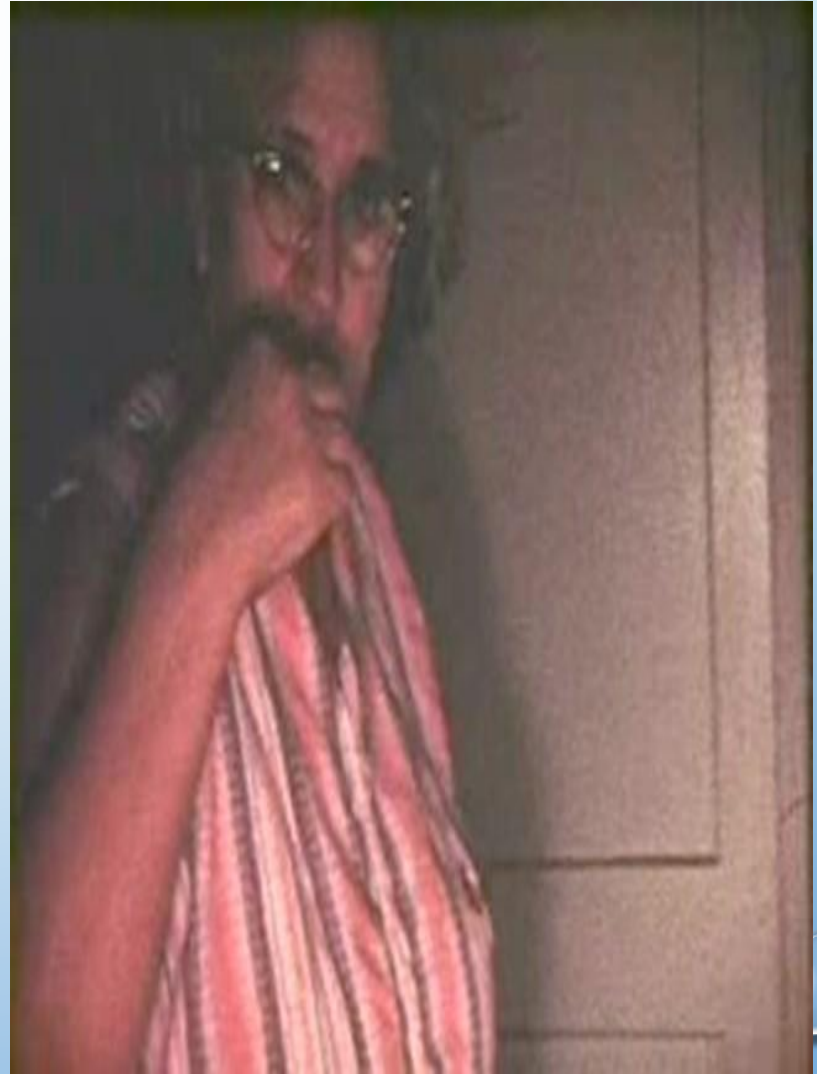

- They are trained in housework, obedience almost bordering on servility.
- They are groomed to be an ideal house (maid) wife.
- The expectations from a girl are her submissiveness and culinary prowess.
- She is expected to be a good nurse and a nanny.

Cultural.....

- The Indian culture advocates tolerance in women.
- This was glorified in our mythology and treated as standard of an ideal women.
- Idolization and idealization of such characters from mythology forced women to be like them.

Educational and Economical:

- Financial dependence is the major factor for women's vulnerability.
- She is treated as a liability and a burden in the household.
- Investing on her education, which would not fetch dividends, is not considered at majority times.
- Struck to the confines of the house, especially the kitchen, her contribution towards financial growth is not significant.

Educational and Economical:

Vulnerable girl.

Exploitation of women in the world of work

We're about to reveal something you'll really drool over.
What a tease. Arby's® introduces exciting new menu items, including the Roastburger.™ It's the burger done better.™ Unfortunately, you'll have to wait until March for the full mouthwatering experience.

I'm thinking Arby's.™

Exploitation of women in the world of work:

- Development has marginalized women.
- Women have to work more than the stipulated hours.
- Sexual harassment.
- Women are victims of casualisation and intermittence of work.

Exploitation of women in the world of work:

- Sometimes they are underpaid and there is discrimination between wages of men and women.
- Increase in the incidence of female child labor.

Exploitation of women in the world of work:

The Invisible Girl Child Labour:

The Invisible Girl Child Labour:

- Children below the age of 14 years, are employed in factories, mines and any hazardous work .
- According to the 2001 Census, there were 43.59 million working children in India.
- The National Sample Survey found 37.36 million working children.
- The Operations Research Group (Baroda) estimates 80 million working children in the country who belong to the rural and urban poor.

- Girls are seen as sharing 20 per cent of the agricultural work of women.
- Women and girls account for more than 50 per cent of the total household energy.
- Girls are involved in substantial numbers in hazardous industries like beedi making.
- A large number of girls are involved in gen polishing, domestic work, garments, cotton and groundnut pod shelling, hand embroidery, grain cleaning, processing of red chilies, etc.

Vulnerable to Abuse:

Over 68 per cent
has been subjected to physical abuse

Vulnerable to Abuse:

About 86 per cent were abused emotionally more than 20 per cent of them were forced to have sexual abuse.

Vulnerable to Abuse:

- Over 68 per cent has been subjected to physical abuse, of which 46.6 per cent had injuries that were seldom attended to.
- About 86 per cent were abused emotionally more than 20 per cent of them were forced to have sexual intercourse with their abusers.

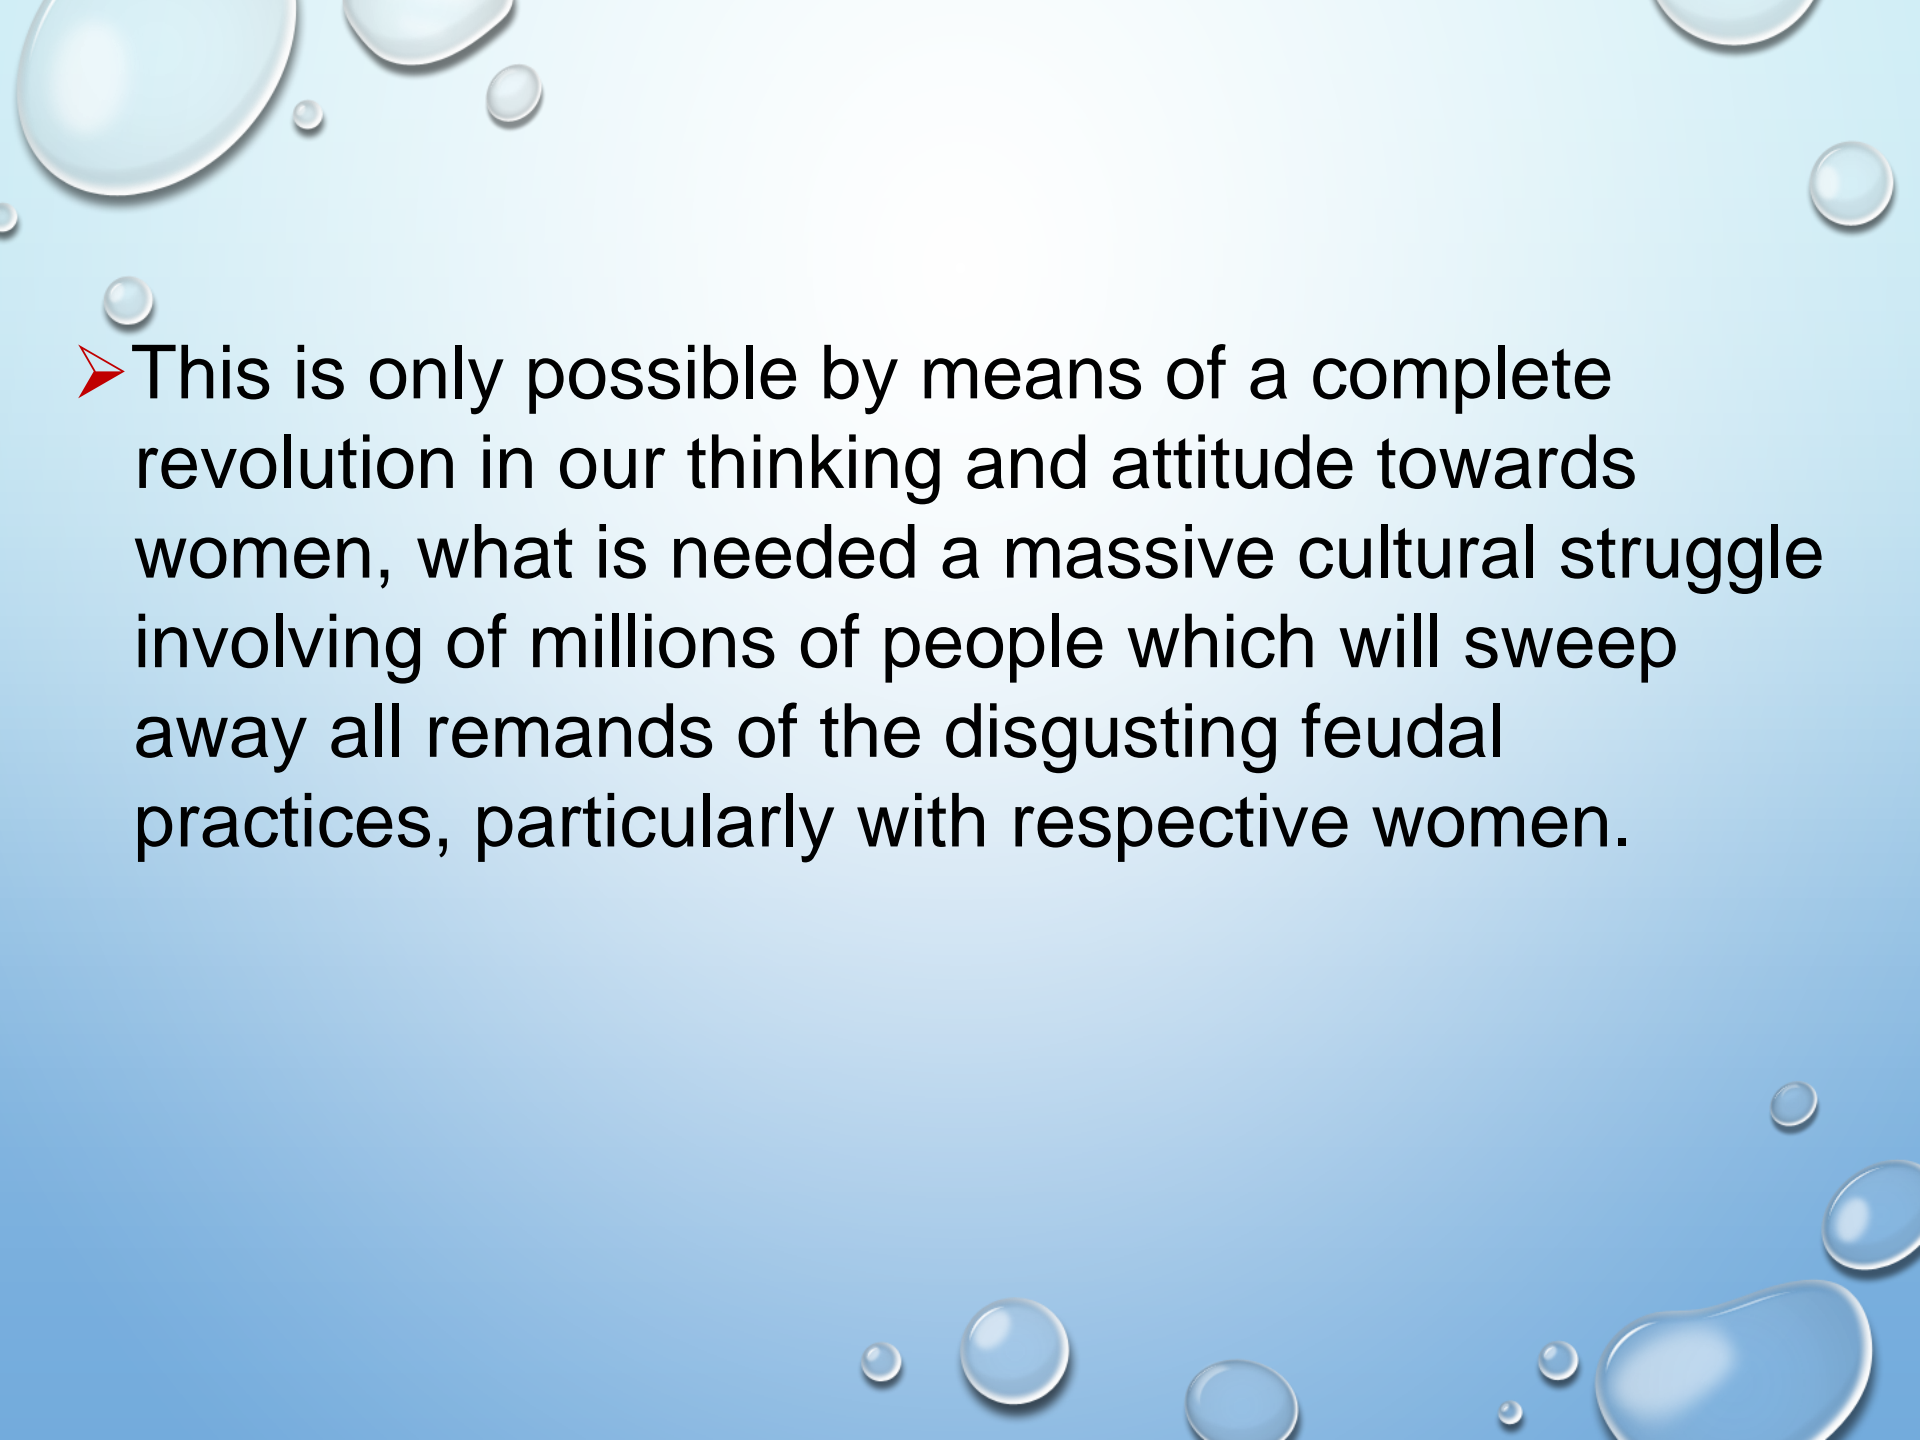

How could be change the environment:

complete equality between men and women.

How could be change the environment:

- Indian society is still largely male-dominated, and most women and girls do not have real freedom.
- A cultural, psychological, educational struggle are needed to sweep away for women and girls.
- These should be replaced with scientific thinking and genuine and complete equality between men and women.

➤ This is only possible by means of a complete revolution in our thinking and attitude towards women, what is needed a massive cultural struggle involving of millions of people which will sweep away all remnants of the disgusting feudal practices, particularly with respect to women.

Thank you
